

Two Against The Rock

Welcome to The Rock, nickname for ASTEROID A-5. Massive, foreboding and desolate, this maximum security penitentiary is home to the dregs, outcasts and misfits of society. No one leaves The Rock.

Now, the Rock is about to welcome its newest resident. Prisoner 197. Wyndham Derrit, also known as Houdini. Houdini is the most notorious escape artist in Demeter City. Now he's sitting, shackled, in the back seat of police cruiser with his escorts, Officers Jack Haldane and Jane Castle at the wheel. What these three travellers don't yet realize is that something catastrophic has happened on The Rock. The warden, all of the guards, and most of the prisoners are dead - gassed by a deadly virus that was released into the ventilation system by an "inner circle" of convicts - the toughest, meanest and most vicious of them all. Only they have the antidote.

The excursion to the Rock is hardly idyllic. First and foremost, Jane is under the weather with a flu that she can't seem to shake. Plus, she and Haldane are bickering relentlessly, as people who are in love but aren't willing to admit it, often do. To top it off, they've hit an ion storm, rendering their transmitter useless for awhile. When they finally do make contact for landing clearance, they are unaware that it's one of the convict's voices they are hearing. By the time their cruiser docks, it's too late. They are surrounded by the cons and thrown into a cell, stepping over dead and dying bodies along the way. Fortunately Haldane and Castle have the great Houdini with them. Within moments he slips out of his shackles and frees the officers to run to their cruiser. Haldane though, is already showing signs that he has caught the virus. Jane, oddly enough, is fine. The flu bug she's been saddled with appears to have given her sufficient antibodies to be able to fight off the virus. Houdini heads to the warden's office to strike a deal with the cons - a shot of the antidote in exchange for the whereabouts of the officers. They agree. Haldane continues to weaken, making their desperate attempt to flee virtually impossible. The cons are in hot pursuit. Time is running out. Jack is dying. Jane knows that there is only one way she can possibly save him - by giving him her flu and hence, some of her antibodies. She kisses him softly. She kisses him again, harder. Sick or not, Haldane responds. They wrap their arms around each other and kiss with a growing passion, ignoring the advancing footsteps of their captors. Meanwhile, Houdini races towards the cruiser. Suddenly, the sound of the cruiser engines fills the air. Houdini heads, full throttle, directly for downtown Demeter City, ignoring all the attempts to contact the cruiser by the now-frantic police officers at the 88th precinct. Finally, Houdini does contact them, informing them of the impending doom that awaits Haldane and Castle on The Rock. Officers Took and Fredo, along with Captain Podly (disguised as a criminal) take off for The Rock on the double.
